Quotes for the Week

“The hope of the Christian has to do with better things than those which are confined within the bounds of time, or which derive their value solely from the estimate put upon them by a mere grovelling, earthly mind. But the hope of the believer stands on a firmer basis, rises higher, takes hold of better comforts, and speeds on the footsteps of the pilgrim soldier with the prospect of far brighter joys to come, than that mere common principle which cheers universal humanity on its march from the cradle to the grave.

The hope of the believer has been well defined to be that grace “whereby, through Christ, he expects and waits for all those good things of the promise he has not yet received.”

Exell, J. S. (n.d.). The Biblical Illustrator: Ephesians (p. 670). New York; Chicago; Toronto; London; Edinburgh: Fleming H. Revell Company.

The hope of the believer is the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but here (1 Thes. 1:1-10) the apostle speaks of the patience of hope. Often, we may well long for the day when trial and tribulation will be ended, and Christ will take us to be with Himself; but we are not to be impatient as we await that glad consummation. He Himself is the Man of Patience, seated upon the throne of God.
